Dear Mr. Larkin:

I am very much indebted to you for your kindness in answering my letter at once and so favourably. I wonder, however, whether you have not unwittingly sent me more than you intended. The cheque is made out for $150, whereas in your letter you speak of $100. Of course if you can let us have $150 we shall greatly appreciate your kindness, because we need every dollar that we can get, but if you intended to send only $100 I will return the cheque.

With renewed assurance of your kindness, I am,

Yours sincerely,

President.
